Literacy

Traditionally, Literacy means "ability to read and write".

Since the emergence of Information Society/knowledge Society, the meaning of the concept of literacy has been changed.

In the present Technological Era,

Literacy means as the "ability to read, understand, use, and re-writen texts in order to achieve personal goals, increase, or knowledge, and obtain individual potential and participation in society. In fact, literacy is considered as the foundation awareness, capacity, and ability of people to acquire knowledge infrastructure of their actions and affairs in life".

LIBRARY ANDN INFORMATION LITERACY

- The library is the most important resource in any academic setting.
- Studies repeatedly show strong positive correlations between student/ user achievement and information literacy programs.
- The library is the place where information is stored, catalogued, indexed and made available.
- Information literacy is too important to be left to change users should be able to see at least one information problem-solving process, to help them become metacognitively aware of how they find, process, and use information etc.
